What is the NRC/GT?
The National Research Center on the Gifted and Talented (NRC/GT) is funded under the Jacob K. Javits Gifted and Talented Students Education Act, Office of Educational Research and Improvement, United States Department of Education. The mission of the NRC/GT is to plan and conduct theory-driven quality research that is problem-based, practice-relevant, and consumer-oriented.

Products available from The National Research Center on the Gifted and Talented...

Research-Based Decision Making Series
These papers are designed to advise practitioners and policymakers about the most defensible practices that can be implemented based on accumulated research evidence.

Research Monographs
Research Monographs describe research studies completed by the NRC/GT.

Practitioners’ Guides
These brochures feature easy-to-understand research findings coupled with practical implications for classrooms and homes on topics of interest to educators and parents.

Video Training Tapes
Tapes are available of all our popular teacher training modules. Reproducible teacher resource guides are included with each tape.

Resource Booklets
These include information on various topics or sources of information in the field of gifted and talented education.

Collaborative Research Studies
Applied or action research is featured rather than a review of extant literature.

How parents can develop their children’s interpretation and translation skills

- Praise children and encourage them to speak the languages they know as much as possible.
- Encourage children to read in all the languages they know.
- Provide resources such as dictionaries, books, and language games.
- Encourage the school to develop and give credit for these abilities.
- Encourage the community to give credit to children and youth who are developing these skills.
- Encourage children to practice interpreting and translating in friendly and non-stressful environments.

Do not put children in situations:
- beyond their capabilities
- that are potentially conflictual or embarrassing
- where the responsibilities are too great for children to handle

“Translation provides an easy avenue to enhance linguistic awareness and pride in bilingualism, particularly for minority bilingual children whose home language is not valued by the majority culture.”

University of Connecticut
The National Research Center on the Gifted and Talented
362 Fairfield Road, U-7
Storrs, CT 06269-2007
www.gifted.uconn.edu

BILINGUAL CHILDREN
interpreting and translating!

Bilingual children have special abilities and talents. One of these talents is the ability to interpret and translate.

Practitioners’ Guide - A9817
Heather Brookes & Claudia Angelleli
What is interpretation/translation?
It is the ability to restate a message given in one language in another language.

- Interpretation is the ability to restate a spoken message in another language.
- Translation is the ability to restate a written message in another language.

Who interprets/translated and why?
In immigrant communities, bilingual children are often called upon to interpret/translate for family and community members who, in some situations, may not yet feel comfortable using the language of wider communication.

Where do they interpret/translate?
Children interpret in many situations, for example:
- shops
- bank
- school
- hospital or clinic
- police station
- social security office
- home:
  - with the neighbors
  - listening to the radio
  - watching television
  - talking on the telephone
  - reading documents
  - filling out forms

Being able to interpret/translate is a special gift and requires many skills.

Young people who interpret/translate not only have the ability to speak two languages, but are also developing the abilities to:

- process complex information in two languages
- express complex ideas
- recall words quickly
- use the structures of both languages to communicate meaning
- listen carefully and understand
- convey a message accurately
- convey the intention of the speaker
- be sensitive towards meaning
- understand and mediate between cultures
- transfer meaning across different cultures
- manage social relations
- help overcome misunderstandings
- be sensitive to different social situations
- negotiate
- adapt to different situations
- solve problems
- take initiative
- self-evaluate

The ability to interpret/translate can lead to an exciting professional career.

Some people study to be interpreters specializing in the spoken form. Some people study to be translators specializing in the written form. Some people choose to train as both interpreters and translators.

Community Interpreters
Interpreting for social services, school districts, and community organizations.

Conference Interpreters
Interpreting for international academic conferences, business meetings, political leaders, and presidents.

Court Interpreters
Interpreting for plaintiffs, defendants, and witnesses in courts of law.

Medical Interpreters
Interpreting for doctors, nurses and patients in hospitals and clinics.

Telephone Interpreters
Interpreting in all situations on the telephone where two parties do not share the same language of communication.

Translators
Translators translate written texts such as:
- medical/scientific documents
- textbooks
- literature
- non-fiction
- film and media
- government/legal documents